INTERNET SITES

The Mood Disorders Association of Ontario

<http://www.mooddisorders.on.ca>

This is a not-for-profit, self-help organization which provides education and information for people with depression and other forms of mood disorders and their families. Sources of practical help are provided, such as information about finding a doctor, a clinic, self-help resources, or a support group.

Centre for Addiction and Mental Health

<http://www.camh.net>

This Canadian site deals with all aspects of mental health and addiction and is a good starting place for research. CAMH provides direct care to those with mental illness and addiction problems, in addition to being a research and training facility. Click on the link About Mental Health & Addictions in the left-hand column and you will find information on treatment and supportive programs.

CANMAT – Canadian Network for Mood and Anxiety Treatments

<http://www.canmat.org>

This website is aimed primarily at health care professionals but may also answer many questions you have about depression. Click on 'Help & Resources' on the top toolbar to access this information.

Canadian Mental Health Association, Ontario Branch

<http://www.ontario.cmha.ca>

This is the Ontario site of the umbrella organization for mental health issues in Canada. Details can be found about the 33 branches throughout Ontario, which provide a variety of services to meet local needs. The site provides comprehensive information about mental illnesses including depression, plus references to local services and supports.

Blue Pages on Depression

<http://bluepages.anu.edu.au>

This is an excellent site from the Centre for Mental Health Research in Australia. As well as general information about the condition, it features a rating system for various treatment methods, based on scientific evidence. There is also an extensive array of online support groups.
