

Trillium picks new chief operating officer

Julia Le, Mississauga News

Oct 19, 2009 - 4:22 PM

<http://www.mississauga.com/news/business/article/156457--trillium-picks-new-chief-operating-officer>

Ruby Brown. Ruby Brown has been appointed as the new chief operating officer and executive vice president of Trillium Health Centre. Photo supplied

Trillium Health Centre has a new chief operating officer and executive vice president. Ruby Brown was appointed to the post on Oct. 14.

Trillium has two centres – one in Mississauga and another in West Toronto.

Brown, who is relocating from Edmonton to Mississauga with her family, says she's excited to join the Trillium Health Centre team.

"In Western Canada we heard a lot about Trillium's innovative approaches to patient care, and I am already seeing that passion for quality and excellence in action," she said.

Trillium president and CEO Janet Davidson says Brown is bringing strong operational, policy and strategic understanding of the health care system.

"Her solid knowledge of regional systems that have experienced transformation will be invaluable to Trillium as we work with the Mississauga-Halton LHIN and our hospital partners to expand the regional integration of programs and services to better meet and anticipate community needs," she said.

Brown has worked in various health care sectors, including acute, long-term care, community and mental health in Alberta, B.C. and the Northwest Territories, over the last 25 years.

She is a registered nurse and holds a MBA from the University of Alberta.

Most recently she was the chief transition officer and vice president of the Alberta Mental Health Board.